Tuesday afternoon James H. Gardner, general superintendent of the Utah Sugar Co. at Lehi, was struck on the back and shoulders by several large pieces of lime rock dumped upon him by a careless workman. He was taken home and Dr. H. E. Steele summoned who attended him. Mr. Gardner will be out again in ten days.

Good liberal Levi Somsen is shy two hard-earned plunks.
Two easy-going Dutchmen got the coin in silver chunks.

It happened at the factory where they came with hardened galls.

And Levi staked them to the "dough" to get some overalls.

The overalls and Dutchmen hit the road for Ogden town.

And Levi waited for their return until the sun went down.

"Can we walk to Ogden?" said they when they got the tip.

And Levi answered "yes, ofcourse" not dreaming they would skip.

Them gari darn Dutchmen ne'er showed up to help their friend Levi.

And when we fellows speak of it he heaves a heavy sigh.

Rights of The Smoker.

Time was, and not long ago, when smoking was regarded as a "nasty" habit, and the devotee of pipe or cigar was banished to the garden or the stables. Nowadays smokers are in the majority, and it is not surprising that they should war against what they regard as the intolerance of the minority. Middle-aged smokers remember their banishment to the stables, while the younger generation, although not lacerated by memories of persecution or intolerance, claims, in the spirit of the age, the right to smoke almost everywhere. The attitude of Mr. Crombie, M. P., who raised the question of smoking in the libraries of the British house of commons, suggests that reformed smoker may become even less tolerant of the use of tobacco than the man who has been a lifelong abstainer from the weed. Mr Crombie's protest against permitting one parliamentary library out of five to be smoked in, although supported by 119 members, was rejected by a majority of 125. It is evident from the remarks of Mr. Harcourt and other members that the "best club in London" is overcrowded; but members of the house who object to the use of tobacco—and it must be confessed that many people are nauseated by the smell—will have no serious grievance in surrendering one library out of five to smokers.

Kempton Comedy Ko.

Crowded houses greeted the Kempton Comedy Ko. at the amusement hall in this city both Tuesday and Wednesday evening of this week. The company gave entire satisfaction in the performances presented and are for above the average traveling troupes that usually come to this place. "The World," presented Tuesday night was a pleasing melo-drama filled with thrilling scenes and interspersed with many humorous features. The specialties introduced between acts were very entertaining and all up-to-date. The vaudeville features were:

Gall Hamilton in Poses Plastique, Serpentine and Fancy Dances.

R. D. Sacray in Up-to-Date Balads and Songs.

Forrest Place, Boy Trick Violinist.

David Rivers, Song Specialist and the moving pictures presented each evening.

"Dora Thorne" was the attraction billed for Wednesday night, but owing to the illness of Lonelle Starr, the bill was changed to "A Woman's Sacrifice," which is a strong piece and pleased the audience.

The following strong cast constitutes the company: Clare Hatten, E. F. Conley, David Rivers, Ned Barrington, R. D. Sacray, Adele Bradford, Myrtle Barrington, Gall Hamilton, Lonelle Starr and Forrest Place.

Winning a Lolo Bride.

It is customary among the Lolos of western China for the bride on the wedding morning to perch herself on the highest branch of a large tree, while the other female members of her family cluster on the lower limbs, armed with sticks.

When all are duly stationed the bridegroom clambers up the tree, assailed on all sides by blows, pushes and punches from the dowagers, and it is not until he has broken through their fence and captured the bride that he is allowed to carry her off.

At a given signal as soon as the guests are assembled the bride starts off through the compartments, followed by her wooer, while the women of the encampment throw every possible impediment in his way, tripping up his unwary feet, holding down curtains to prevent his passage and applying willow and alder switches unmercifully as he stoops to raise them.

As with the maiden on the trestle, the Korak bride is invariably captured, however much the possibilities of escape may be in her favor.

Must Attend School.

A. C. Nelson, superintendent of school, has mailed to the various county superintendents a letter calling attention to the law in regard to the attendance at schools of all persons under 16 years of age. The county superintendents are required to attend to delinquents that may reside in their counties. A copy of the letter follows:

"The law requires every parent, guardian or other person having control of any child between 8 and 16 years of age to send such child to a public, district or private school in the district in which he resides at least thirty weeks in each school year; unless, for specific reasons prescribed by law (chapter 95, section 1962) such parent, guardian or other person shall be excused from such duty by the school board of the district.

"The law further requires juvenile court officers to commit to school any minor found growing up in idleness."—Int. Mt. Republican.

Concerning Horses.

Rye may be fed advantageously to horses. Two quarts of oats with one of rye are about equivalent to four quarts of oats. It is better to have the rye cracked—not ground.

A bunch of smartweed rubbed on the horse will keep the flies away.

Take care of the colt. Start early to feed a few oats. He should be well groomed and constantly handled. Accustom him early to harness.

To give a horse a drench, place a stout rope in his mouth and around upper jaw. Back him up in a stall or corner. Throw loose end of rope over beam overhead and let another man hold it taut or loose as required. Stand on a box and lift horse's head up. Take in slack of the rope and hold head in position. The mouth of a long-necked bottle, containing the drench, should be loosely placed in the horse's nostril, and contents allowed to run out. Not a drop will be spilled, if properly managed, as the animal is obliged to swallow at once.
